which Mr. Davis evidently wished to place her in.

He asked her if she knew a number of men, many of them being notorious bootleggers and chauffeurs. She knew some of them.

She claimed Alien had told her he obtained a divorce on the night she went riding with him alone.

Asked about a ride to Sunset Point on that night, which Mr. Davis referred to in his question as a secluded place, she said, in reference to the seclusion:

You ought to know."

"That is quite true." returned the imperturbable Ralph. "But, being a married man. I seldom go to such places at night."

The laugh which followed was quickly silenced by the gavel of the judge.

"Help" Plea Denied.

Under a merciless running fire of questions shot from the tireless lips of Mr. Davis, the girl was forced to recount, with all its profune details, the wild ride to the lonely spot just over the Wolf river bridge, where she said she was finally dragged from the carby McNamara.

she was finally dragged from the carby McNamara.

There, she testified, McNamara told her in blunt and brutal language of how he intended to make her a sacrifice to his unholy desires. There, her appeal to the chivalry of an unknown man who drove by in an automobile going in the direction from whence they had come, failed to bring her the succor she crayed. The girl claimed that she ran to the car and jumped on the running heard, crying to its occupant: "Help me!" The driver of the car answered with this: "Get off my car!"

While this was taking place, the girl testified, one of her companions who had been injured had gone to the river with Longley to wash the blood off her nose, and the other was sitting up on a hank apart from them with Frey.

Davis forced the girl to admit that she did not tell the stranger to whom she appealed of McNamara's threats to violate her. She told again that she rimply cried out: "Help Me!"

Tried to Jump From Car.

Tried to Jump From Car. She would have jumped from McNa-mara's side into the road to save her-self from the threatened violation at one stage of the journey to the river-nottoms, the girl teld Mr. Davis, but McNamara prevented it-by catching hold of her with both hands. She opened the door and sot one foot out before he pulled her back, she claimed. The defendant's attorney made every effort to shatter this story, working hard to prove the absurdity of the defendant's ability to drive a speeding automobile and hold the girl with both hands. But the girl such to her story, finally declaring that McNamara boasted to her: "You are tooking at a who can drive a car as good with his feet us be can with his hands." She, had previously testified that the car was speeding at the fact that the car was apeeding at the fact of "65 miles an hour."

Mr. Davis confronted the witness with the fact that she knew that McNamara was a married man and that he also had "a girl," but that nevertheless she was going along "to substitute for his wife and his girl."

A few minutes before court was adjourned at 12:30 a little, mustached man shuffled into the courtroom with a strong suggestion of ostentation. It was necessary for the judge to reprimand the spectators at one juncture when the girl told Mr. Davis her reply to McNamara's statement of his evil intentions: "You are not talking to some 'grease ball' when you talk to me," she claimed she told McNamara. The spectators then laughed and the judge rapped for order, deciaring, he would clear the court room at further demonstrations.

Mr. Davis demanded a definition of the sentence, and the girl explained that she meant "the kind he had been going with."

Court adjourned at 12:30 until 2 p. m. Monday afternoon, when the examination of the chief prosecuting witness will continue.
So intense was the interest in the girl's testimony against McNamara that not a person in the throng which packed the courtroom left his or her seat, apparently rather being willing to forego dinner or luncheon than miss a line of the testimony.

JONES-REAVIS BILL

A. L. Dabney, consulting engineer, Saturday asked the City club to go on record as supporting the passage of the Jones-Reavis bill, which proposes a consolidation of all federal bureaus re-lating to engineering projects, construc-tion, surveys and road building in one department.

The plan has been urged by a con-vention of engineers and architects and other technical experts, which was re-cently held in Chicago, at which rep-resentatives of more than 75 societies and clubs were present. Mr. Dahney is a member of the committee for Ten-bessee which was appointed at the con-vention to work for the passage of the hill vention to work for the passage of the bill.

He explained that it provides for changing the name of the department of the interior to the department of public works. "There is now a constant overlapping of the work of a score of rederal bureaus," he said, "and a lack of co-ordination which results in delay in getting action on many matters of the greatest importance. For example, the engineering work of the United States is now scattered through five departments, those of the treasury, which includes the work of the supervising architect and his assistants, the interior, the department of commerce, the war department and the department of agriculture. Building construction, geologic surveys, road building and many other buresus, should all be under one head."

The City club will discuss the question next Saturday. Mr. Dabney will also present it to the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary, Klwanis, Lions and other civic organizations. It has airready been indorsed by the Engineers' club.

Some of the mills are very afficient and the operating data which will establish an average manufacturers cost of handling a ton of cotton need. Any attempt to fix a reasonable manufacturers cost is open to attacked as entirely too low by the inefficient miller, while the farmer would be attacked as entirely too low by the inefficient miller, while the farmer would judge this same average cost as too high. And, moreover, probably no one knows what the average cost is.

"But any attempt to arrive at what is a fair price for a ton of cotton seed to the farmer must be based first, on the value of the oil, meal, bulls and linters to the miller; and second, a reasonable operating cost plus a fair profit to the miller.

"The answer to the question will depend on the quality of the need, the efficiency of the miller and the prices received by him for the products obtained from a ton of cotton seed.

No Premiums Paid. Since the inefficient oil miller is not entitled to as great a profit as the efficient operator, we prefer to make the operating or manufacturers cost and the profit as one item. In this way the profit is higher when the operating cost is lower and the profit lower when the operating cost is high or the operations inefficient.

"It appears to us we are under obligations to give our readers some basis for judging what they should receive for a ton of seed under present conditions. These conditions vary in different sections and from day to day, or from week to week. The figures or estimates we will use are therefore not thought to be absolute. Any man can attack them and in particular cases show them inaccurate, but on the other hand they are noughly as pearly fair show them inaccurate, but on the other hand they are probably as nearly fair has, any which can be given. At least, they will serve as a basis for calculating the value of a ton of seed, or what the farmer should receive for a ton of seed. If anyone has different information for a particular case, he can use this information and yet arrive at the approximate price which in such a case he should receive for his seed.

"We assume the following as a fair statement of the average products from a ton of average upland cotton seed:

Approximate Figures.

Approximate Figures.

"These figures are only approximations. Less oil may be obtained very early in the season with inefficient milling. More will usually be obtained with efficient milling, especially later in the season. The other items will also vary with considerable margins. Less meni and more hulls may be made, and more or less linters may be taken off, but these are the figures on which we propose to base our calculations.

"The value of these products is calculated on the following prices: Oil 18½ cents a pound, smeal (so-called 4 per cent meal) 364 a ton, hulls $8 a ton, linters 3 cents a pound, as follows:

300 lbs. of oil at 16½c. $49.50 1,025 lbs. meal at $64 23.50 475 lbs. hulls at $8 1.00 75 lbs. linters at 3c. $2.25

The prices of both linters and hulls will probably be higher before much are gold by the mills, but they are small items and will influence the results but ison by the mins, but they are small istems and will influence the results but little.

"To find the price which a farmer should receive for a ton of seed which yields products of the above value of $86.45 we must deduct the costs and profits of the oil miller.

"To the efficient miller the operating cost will, not exceed $13.50 a ton, and to this we may add a profit of $5.50 per ton, or, as we prefer, a total operating allowance of $17 to the miller. We must also add freight to an average amount of say $2 a ton. If it is less the farmer should profit by it, and if it is more the former should receive just that much less for his seed. It will not cost the efficient miller $3.50 a ton to handle a ton of seed, and in such case his profit will be more than $3.50 a ton. If it costs the ineffectent miller more to handle a ton of seed his profits will and should be less. In other words, we are allowing a total handling charge and profit of $19 a ton, which leaves $67.45, which the producer should receive fog his ton of seed on this basis of calculation.

"Unless prices for oil, meal, hulls and linters go below the prices we have assumed, which are about right for the date this article is written, the hill farmer should not get less than $65 for a ton of cottonseed of average quality.

"The Mississippl and Arkansas delta farmer should get three or four dollars more a ton for their seed because they Senstor McCumber said the argument of Senator Johnson and other supporters of the Johnson amendment as to Britain's voting power was "too absurd to be true," and asked why France, italy and other nations did not raise objections to "putting their heads in the lion's mouth."

The North Dakota senator said the "real facts" regarding the league were: "That neither the council nor assembly is a board of arbitration.

"That the only jurisdiction which the council or assembly have over a dispute between nations is the right to investigate and report what the true facts are . . and make recommendations.
